Prepare Now for Severe Weather this Spring

Thunderstorms are very common in Georgia, especially during the spring and summer. Thunderstorm hazards include damaging winds, hail, flash floods and tornadoes. Severe thunderstorms can produce hail of one inch or larger and wind gusts up to 58 mph or greater.

Know the difference between a watch and a warning:

- A Thunderstorm Watch means conditions are favorable for severe thunderstorms to develop, but there is not an immediate threat.
- A Thunderstorm Warning means a severe thunderstorm has been detected and an imminent threat to life and property has developed.

You can get weather watch and warning information from multiple sources. A National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Weather Radio, television, battery operated radio, cell phone alerts and sirens are all ways you can receive watch and warning information.

How can you protect yourself and your family from severe thunderstorms? By creating an emergency action plan before threatening weather develops. Sit down with your family and decide how you will contact each other, where you will go, and what you will do if severe weather should occur. Here are a few additional tips:

Create a basic disaster supply kit:

- Keep extra water and non-perishable food on hand should you lose power.
- Make sure you have a manual can opener.
- Place flashlights throughout the house.
- Keep extra batteries on hand.
- Charge your cell phone and a backup charger.

When a severe weather warning is issued:

- If outside, seek shelter in your home or in a nearby building.
- Once inside, move to a basement or an interior room on the lowest floor. Some winds from a severe thunderstorm can cause damage equal in magnitude to a tornado. Put as many walls between you and the outside as possible.
