Outside Water Conservation Tips to Help You Save

During warmer months, we all tend to spend more time gardening, working on our lawns, and washing our cars. Since many of these activities include the use of water, your water usage and your water bill can increase significantly.

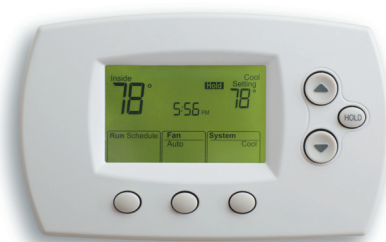

Below are tips on how to conserve water and still maintain a beautiful green landscape.

- Adjust your mower to a higher setting. A taller lawn provides shade to the roots and helps retain soil moisture so your lawn requires less water.
- Water before 10 a.m. or after 6 p.m. when temperatures are a little cooler and water evaporation is minimized.
- Adjust your sprinklers so that they are watering your lawn and garden, and not the street or sidewalk.
- Your garden's and lawn's water needs may vary depending on the heat and amount of rain. Investing in a timer or automatic watering system can help you save time and money.
- When watering potted plants, group plants with like watering needs. Also, creating "watering zones" in your garden will allow you to give each plant the water it requires.

Save on Cooling Costs this Summer

Rising temperatures can cause rising power bills, but if you adjust your thermostat up by just a few degrees, you can save money this summer. Set your thermostat at 78 degrees or higher and reduce your cooling costs by up to two to three percent for each degree of adjustment.

Programmable thermostats can also help your home maintain the appropriate temperature with a preset schedule based on when you are home or when you are sleeping. Programmable thermostats can typically store and repeat six or more temperature settings per day. Through automatic temperature setups and setbacks, you can alter your home's temperature as it makes the most sense for your lifestyle. And, if your schedule should change, you can easily override your set temperature by manually setting the temperature without affecting the rest of your daily or weekly program.

Keep in mind that the location of your thermostat can affect its performance and efficiency. To operate properly, a thermostat must be on an interior wall away from direct sunlight, drafts, doorways, skylights, and windows.
