ABOUT ELIZABETH PORTER PARK

Located just off North Marietta Parkway at Allgood Road, Marietta's Elizabeth Porter Park is scheduled to be constructed in 2017. The park will feature a

- playground,
- splash pad,
- walking track,
- and a pavilion.

While the park is built to serve all Mariettans, the site holds a special significance for Baptist Town residents. Prior to this use, the site was originally developed in the 1940s as the Cobb Cooperative Negro Hospital. A group of private citizens raised funds to ensure adequate medical services could be available for African American residents across Cobb County. After its closure in 1950, the site continued to serve generations of neighborhood residents as the Montgomery Street Recreation Center, teen Canteen, and Elizabeth Porter Recreation Center.

PRESERVING THE HISTORY

Early concept of 150ft mural being considered for the site.

To ensure the preservation of this history, a committee of community members has worked since 2015 to design elements within the park that will depict the story of the site's history and significance.

Much of the conversation has focused on the installation of a mural as well as a statue. While the committee is working with the City of Marietta to fund the mural, funds have not been secured for the statue.

Please help us preserve this history. Consider joining this effort by donating to the Elizabeth Porter Park Fund.

HOW WILL FUNDS BE USED?

Raised funds are reserved for enhancements within Elizabeth Porter Park. The initial goal is to fund a statue honoring Elizabeth Porter who spent much her professional career supporting the children of the Baptist Town community in Marietta as manager of the Montgomery Street Recreation Center, later renamed the Elizabeth Porter Recreation Center. Additionally, plans call for the installation of interpretative signage to further depict the site's history.
